President's Report

Sylvia Tilford

BSc, MA, PGCE, Dip.HEd, FRSPH, MIHPE

At the AGM we bid farewell to Dr Derek Attwood whose term of office had come to an end. I would like to record thanks to him for his contributions. Dr Mark Forshaw stepped down after his two years as President during which he ably guided IHPE through some significant changes. In addition he took on the acting role as editor of the IHPE journal and provided a series of stimulating and challenging President's letters in the journal. Warm thanks were extended to Mark. Dr Anne Coufopoulos was welcomed back as a Trustee. The AGM confirmed Dr Ruth Cross and Dr Mark Forshaw as co-editors of the IHPE journal and Susan Thompson as Honorary Secretary. In addition two Honorary Vice-Presidents, Dr. John Kemm and Professor Andy Blinkhorn were appointed and Dr Siobhain O'Riordan was made an Honorary Life Member for her services to the journal. Towards the end of the year we welcomed two further Trustees, Dr Pat Owen from Keele University and Helena Conibear from the Alcohol Education Trust. They bring valuable experience to the Board. I would like to express my thanks to all members of the Board for their hard work and many contributions during the year and especially to Sylvia Cheater, Treasurer, Susan Thompson, Secretary and Dawn Wills for her administrative support. As a team we bring together a breadth of current and past experience which can be drawn on as we work to achieve IHPE goals.

Although IHPE is a relatively small organisation it is a distinctive one in being a voice for health promotion and education. Health promotion practice takes place in a variety of contexts although a significant amount now occurs as part of public health within local authorities. We are, therefore, particularly concerned to see that adequate resources are available for public health and we take an active interest in public health's priorities as far as key health issues and health promotion strategies are concerned. Our Conference in 2017 will be focussed on examining public health four years after its movement back into local authorities including the impacts of this move on health promotion. Our thanks to Sue Sherwin, Dean of Health and Community Studies at Leeds Beckett University for her support and the Health Promotion Department at the University for funding the accommodation for the Conference.

A major aim of the Institute is to seek to influence Government policy on health related matters, either on its own or through linking with other like-minded organisations. This year, for example, we have continued to support the campaign for personal social and health education as a statutory requirement in schools and responded to Government documents on a number of issues, including funding for public health. A series of rapid responses and letters in the BMJ have offered comments from IHPE on various aspects of public health including the challenge of addressing health inequalities and the prevalent issues of obesity and tobacco control. Dr Michael Craig Watson should be thanked warmly for his lead on generating rapid responses.

The building of a strong membership base and maintaining good links with members remains an imperative for IHPE. In reaching out to existing members and recruiting new ones we have actively used the news section on the website, extended the circulation of the bi-monthly newsletter and distributed a new publicity flier. In addition Trustees have worked to secure new members through their individual networks and it is anticipated that the 2017 Conference will also attract some new members. Early in 2017 the use of social media will be developed, beginning with Twitter. IHPE has also continued to support health promotion practice by linking with relevant professional organisations. It is, for example, a core member of the Sex Education Forum, has been in dialogue this year with the Faculty of Public Health and has worked on other potential links.

The International Journal of Health Promotion and Education Journal has continued to be a major asset for IHPE. Co- authors Dr Ruth Cross and Dr Mark Forshaw have continued the development of the journal as a strong and coherent academic voice for health promotion. It has achieved its highest impact figure to date (.57) on Research Gate and is progressing towards its goal of achieving an official impact factor. The last year has seen an impressive range of papers from a number of countries and the journal fully meets its international definition.

2016 marked 30 years of the Ottawa Charter, a seminal document as far as health promotion is concerned. Nonetheless there are many illustrations of the lack of knowledge of this document and importantly of its broad approach to health promotion. Trustees have in various ways responded to this anniversary through President's letters in the IHPE journal, in BMJ rapid responses, by signing up to the new Vienna Declaration, submission of a journal article, and involvement in a UK initiative to update the Charter. The Institute remains strongly committed to promoting the principles laid down in the Charter and bringing them to the attention of those whose practice is too heavily focussed on individualistic factors and insufficiently responsive to the underlying social determinants of health

During my two terms of office I am committed to the consolidation of all key aspects of IHPE's work and to the support of new developments. This requires that we build our resources while using existing ones imaginatively and effectively. Pursuing the broad goals of health promotion is a significant challenge at the present time and IHPE has an important role in this process.

Honorary Treasurer's Report

Sylvia Cheater MBE

MSc, Cert.Mgmt (HSC) (Open), MIHPE

The Statement of Financial Activities, Balance Sheet and Notes are to be found on the website. The level of reserve is comparable with 2015 and membership continues to grow slowly but steadily. Using the website and social media to highlight issues of interest to members and followers of the Institute has helped to reduce other communication costs. 2016 marked two years of the Institute as a registered charity and limited company. The focus for 2017 will be to build the membership base and maximise opportunities to raise the profile of the Institute and achieve its charitable objectives.

Honorary Secretary's Report

Susan Thompson

RGN, MPH, PGCHE, FHEA, MIHPE

Notable achievements by the Institute and its members during the year include Sylvia Cheater (IHPE's Treasurer) being awarded an MBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours list, 2016 for services to Women and the community. We heartedly congratulate Sylvia for achieving this honour.

New leaflets and posters have been designed and produced to promote the Institute and the benefits of becoming a member. The website continues to be regularly updated with useful information for the membership. Eleven new members joined the Institute this year, however the year also saw a number of long standing members resign due to retirement. Membership for year end 2016 stood at 119, it is the opinion of the trustees that the membership is a more active one, however the drive for new members persists.

Various contacts were made with key figures involved in public health to inform them about the Institutes' views and activities. Examples were: Chair of the Health Select Committee in the House of Commons - Dr Sarah Wollaston, President of the Association of Directors of Public Health - Dr Andrew Furber, President of the Faculty of Public Health - Professor John Middleton.

In addition the Institute involved its membership in responding to consultations on proposed public health and health promotion policy through liaison with the National Institute of Health and Care Excellence and All Party Parliamentary Committees. This ensures that the expertise and experience of the Institute's membership can impact the nation's health.

Newsletter Editor's Report

Sylvia Tilford

BSc, MA, PGCE, Dip.HEd, FRSPH, MIHPE

The newsletter has been published six times during the year and its circulation has been extended. The editorial team of Sylvia Tilford, Michael Watson and Dawn Wills has remained the same with occasional support from other Trustees. The newsletter has continued to publicise current health promotion issues from the UK as well as international ones, provided updates on new resources and publications and featured members. Items this year have included global health issues of poverty, air pollution, water, child health and national ones of obesity, tobacco, mental health, personal, social and health education, parks and health etc. Contributions from readers have been invited. The newsletter is a valuable way of communicating with our memberships and is complemented by the News section on the IHPE website. I would like to thank the members of the editorial team for their work over the last year.

International Journal of Health Promotion and Education Editorial Board Report

Ruth Cross – Editor

PhD, RN, BSc (Hons), MSc, PGCHE, MBPsS, FHEA, FRSPH, MIHPE

Mark Forshaw - Editor
BSc(Hons), PhD, CPsychol, CSci, FBPsS, FIHPE

The journal has a growing reputation, as judged by its highest ever current impact factor on Research Gate (.57), which augurs well for our aim to apply for an official impact factor in the future, when appropriate.

The co-editors have a good working relationship and are consistent in their methods and approaches to the journal. Some excellent papers have been published, and in keeping with the desire to improve the journal and its IF, we do not shy away from rejecting a high proportion of submissions if they lack rigour.

We have increased the pool of reliable reviewers, but the journal's biggest single problem, something which the previous editor had also experienced, is the lack of enthusiasm amongst reviewers. Some papers sit in the system for too long because of reviewers declining, or because the Scholar One system suggests reviewers which, we discover later, have changed email addresses or simply disappeared from practice or academia. At present we have, for example, a paper which is potentially very interesting but NINE attempts to find a reviewer have been unsuccessful. We repeatedly ask for reviewers in our editorials for the journal, but there have been no volunteers. We are reticent to rely too much on the kindness of our close colleagues and the IHPE Board themselves, but sometimes this is the only way to move certain papers through the system.

In the last year the majority of papers have come through Canada, the UK, Australia, the US and certain countries within Europe, but we have also published papers from Vietnam, Ghana, Zimbabwe and Finland, and so the international theme remains strong, and the spread is not limited to richer, more resourced countries.

Pittu Laungani Award,

The award winners this year were from Canada: the successful paper was "Sports day in Canada: a longitudinal evaluation" by Lauren White, Alicia Luciani, Tanya R. Berry, Sameer Deshpande, Amy Latimer-Cheung, Norm O'Reilly, Ryan E. Rhodes, John C. Spence, Mark S. Tremblay, and Guy Faulkner. The paper was not only of wide interest but represented a lot of extremely hard work by the authors who had rigorously conducted a longitudinal study of considerable merit.
